ANAESTHESIA AND YOU

Anaesthetists in Australia are specialised, highly-trained doctors expert at administering pain management drugs as well as managing resuscitation and other medical emergencies.

You can ask your anaesthetist any questions and air any concerns before your procedure. It is important that you disclose any information that may be relevant and to follow your medical and fasting instructions. Your anaesthetist will monitor you throughout your procedure as well as afterwards to ensure your smooth recovery.

New surgical techniques combined with modern anaesthesia means that the majority of eye surgeries are now performed during day surgery, which is preferable to overnight hospitalisation.

Various types of anaesthesia are commonly used in day surgery, including:-

Topical Anaesthesia

Topical anaesthesia covers a small surface area only and may or may not include sedative drugs. The patient remains awake and recovery is fast.

Local Anaesthesia

Local anaesthesia causes numbness to a larger area than topical anaesthesia. The patient remains awake but comfortable, and does not feel any pain.

Regional Anaesthesia

Regional anaesthesia involves a nerve block to numb a particular part of the body, avoiding the need for general anaesthetic. Similar to the above methods, the patient is awake but comfortable.

Intravenous Sedation

To make things more pleasant for the patient, an anaesthetist may intravenously administer sedation drugs. The patient feels very relaxed and a little drowsy. Advantages of intravenous sedation includes fast recovery times, with discharge typically within an hour.

General Anaesthesia

General anaesthetic puts the patient into a state of unconsciousness for the duration of their operation. Anaesthesia drugs are injected through a needle placed in the vein and this is combined with a mixture of gases for inhalation. The anaesthetist monitors the patient's condition closely throughout the procedure. Recovery time is longer with a general anaesthetic.

IMPORTANT MESSAGE

Anaesthetic drugs are given in the smallest effective doses, however they may take a while to be eliminated from your body due to different rates of metabolism. Even if you feel fully recovered, it is imperative that you do not drive, operate machinery or sign important documents for 24 hours following your procedure.

WAYS YOU CAN ASSIST AS A CARER

- Walk on the side of the covered eye and help them through doorways.
- Offer support in case they are unsteady on their feet.
- Help them identify steps and changes underfoot.
- Ensure they do not have anything important to do and can take time to rest and sleep.

Ideally, patients should go straight home and rest after their discharge from centre.

Patients are given post-operative instructions prior to discharge. It is helpful if you can listen to the instructions too. All instructions will also be given in writing.

You may need to visit a pharmacy to purchase medications following discharge and prior to the post-operative visit to the specialist.

We recommend that all patients have someone stay with them for 24 hours after they go home as the medications will still be in their system and they may not feel well.

INFORMATION FOR YOUR CARER

Please ask your nominated carer to read the following:

Your partner, relative or friend requires your full assistance during their recovery period.

Depending on the particulars of their surgery or procedure, they may have short-term, significant impairments to their vision, hearing or ability to eat, drink and talk.

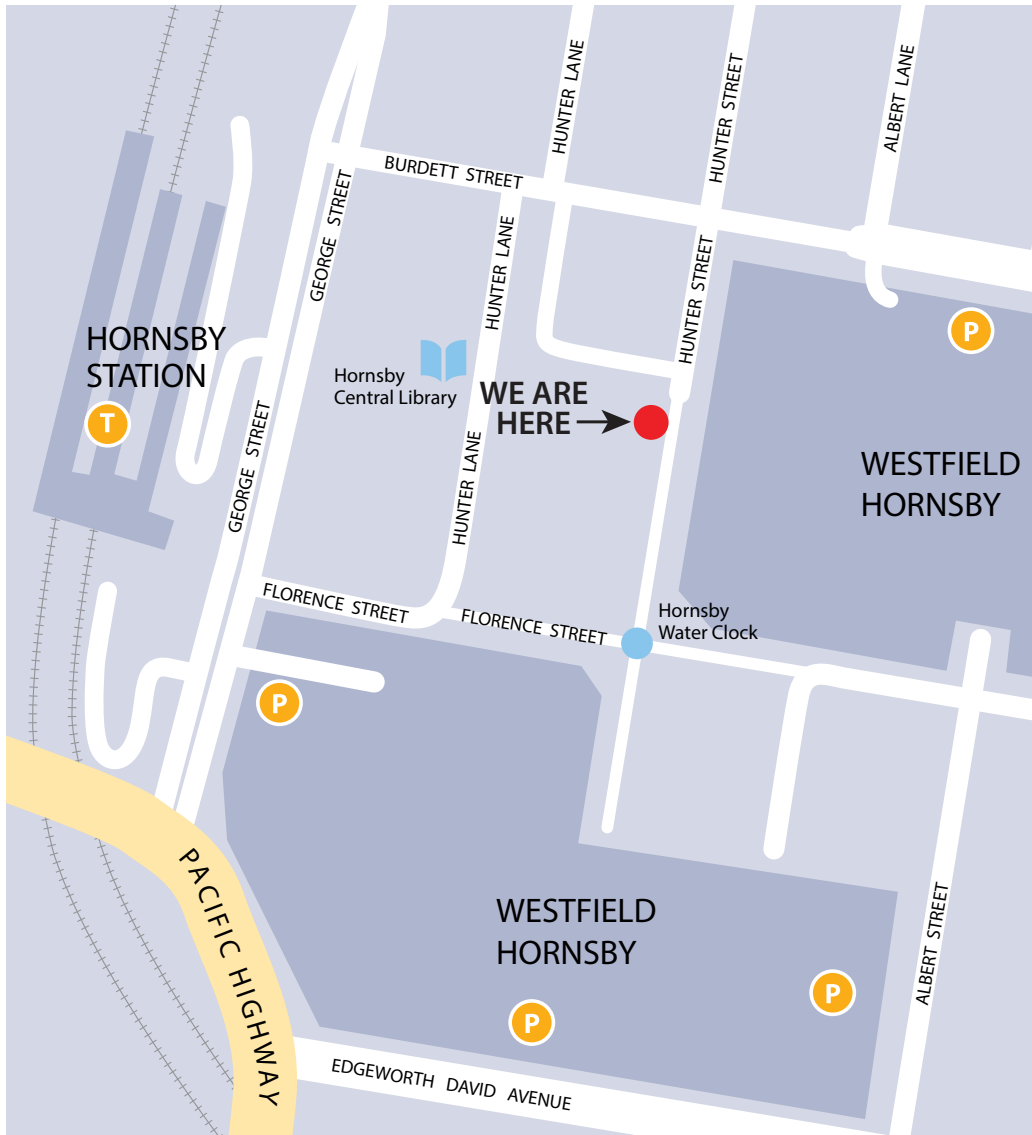

Anaesthesia can affect their memory for a short period of time and they must avoid driving, operating heavy machinery or signing any important documents for at least 24 hours following anaesthesia.

These drugs may also affect the balance so they may be unsteady on their feet.

Thank you for choosing our facility and allowing us to be part of your health care team.
